

Records of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Diocese of South Carolina, 1706-1972
SCHS 273.00

Creator: Episcopal Church, Diocese of South Carolina.

Description: 13.25 linear ft.

Historical Note: The Protestant Episcopal Church in the Diocese of South Carolina was created in 1785 to continue the work of the churches established under the Church of England during the colonial period. From the lowcountry parishes established in the early 18th century, the diocese expanded westwardly throughout the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. In 1922 it was divided geographically into two parts: the Diocese of South Carolina, encompassing the older parishes of the coastal region, and the Diocese of Upper South Carolina, which includes churches to the west of Columbia, its see city.

Scope and Content: Records are divided into three categories: primary records of diocesan-level administrative bodies and activities; primary records of organizations, churches, and individuals associated with the Diocese of South Carolina; and subject files on individuals, churches, organizations, and institutions within the Diocese. The present collection contains a limited amount of materials relating to the Diocese of Upper South Carolina.

Primary records of diocesan-level administrative bodies and activities include records of the Board of Missions (1877-1952), Board of Trustees (1880-1970), Consecration Committee (1960-1961), Division Committee (1920), Executive Council (1922-1941), and the Standing Committee (1892-1935), and the manuscript journals of the annual diocesan conventions (1785-1892). These materials consist primarily of correspondence, minutes, financial records, and reports. In addition, the records of the diocesan Historiographers (1878-1962), primarily John Kershaw (d. 1921) and Albert Sidney Thomas (1873-1967), consist of research notes and drafts of church histories which formed the basis of Thomas's "A Historical Account of the Protestant Episcopal Church in South Carolina, 1820-1957" (published in 1957).

Among the primary records of organizations, churches, and individuals associated with the Diocese of South Carolina are manuscript journals of the Society for the Advancement of Christianity in South Carolina (1810-1971), records of the extinct church at St. Paul's, Stono (1706-1864), manuscript sermons by Theodore Dehon (1776-1817) and Stiles Mellichamp (d. 1872), and minutes of the Church Women of Trinity Church, Edisto Island (1895-1972). The papers of Alexander Glennie (1804-1880) and Philip Gadsden (1798-1870) contain information relating to their ministry to slaves at All Saints, Waccamaw, and St. Paul's, Stono, respectively.

Subject files include clippings, notes, and ephemera relating to nearly two hundred individuals, churches, and institutions associated with the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Diocese of South Carolina.

BOX 1

273.01.01: BOARD OF MISSIONS (1877-1952)

The Board of Missions of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of South Carolina was created in the 1870s to extend its ministry to the African-American population of the state. The Society for the Advancement of Christianity in South Carolina had been charged with this work in 1869, but in 1875 the Board of Missions was created to address this specific need. The Board did not convene until 1877, however, owing to the financial distress of the state.

273.01.02: BOARD OF TRUSTEES RECORDS, 1880-1970

The Board of Trustees of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Diocese of South Carolina was created in 1880 to provide a holding body of trustees for the possession of the Diocese. For nearly two decades its existence was rather informal, and was composed of the bishop and the members of the diocesan Standing Committee. In 1899 the Board of Trustees was officially established as a separate body, and in 1902 it was incorporated by the state. The records of the Board of Trustees consist primarily of correspondence (1888 to 1970) and minutes (1880 to 1948). The bulk of the correspondence is concerned with the finances, property, and legal issues of specific churches, and is arranged accordingly.

273.01.04: CONVENTIONS OF THE DIOCESE (1785-1892)

BOX 4

From its formation in 1785, the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of South Carolina inaugurated an annual convention attended by representatives from each of its parishes. This collection of the manuscript copies of the minutes and reports of these annual conventions from 1785 to 1882 include addresses by the bishops, reports of various organizations and committees, discussions and resolutions, and lists of representatives from each of the attending churches. Also included are the separate financial records of the conventions from 1835 through 1907. Frederick Dalcho's Historical Account of the Protestant Episcopal Church in South Carolina (1820) includes the minutes of the annual diocesan conventions 1785-1818 in an appendix. Since that time the records of these annual conventions have been published in pamphlet form, and are available elsewhere.

The Division Committee was appointed to oversee the division of the Diocese of South Carolina into two geographical parts, which created the Diocese of Upper South Carolina in 1922. Included here also is a typescript copy of a speech (1943) delivered by Bishop A. S. Thomas arguing against a proposed reunion of the two diocese.

By Material Type

273.01.05 (S): Speech, Bishop Thomas against reunion, typescript, 1943 (plus clippings, ca. 1938)

273.01.06: EXECUTIVE COUNCIL: Minutes, 1922-1941 (disbound).

273.01.07: HISTORIOGRAPHERS' RECORDS (1878-1962)

The office of Registrar was created in 1873 and the Rev. John Johnson (1829-1907) first appointed to this position. According to Canon XI of the Diocese laws, the Registrar's duty was "to collect and take charge of all documents and papers pertaining to the history of the Church in this Diocese or in any one of the Parishes." In 1915 the office of Historiographer was added to the list of diocesan officers, with the aim of producing a continuation of Frederick Dalcho's Historical Account of the Protestant Episcopal Church in South Carolina (1820). The first to hold this title, the Rev. Percival H. Whaley (1853-1915), died shortly thereafter, and was succeeded by the Rev. Dr. John Kershaw. The Rev. Albert Sidney Thomas served as historiographer from 1921 until his death in 1967. These records, together with those of Harriett Kershaw Leiding (b. 1878), a Charleston historian and daughter of the Rev. Dr. John Kershaw—represent the effort to collect, organize, and explicate the history of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this diocese. Included are correspondence, research notes, and drafts of diocesan history written by the various historiographers. Bishop Thomas's A Historical Account of the Protestant Episcopal Church in South Carolina, 1820-1957 (published in 1957), represents the end product of these collected materials.

273.02.14: CHURCH OF THE ASCENSION, COMBAHEE, 1848-1862

When a committee from Ashepoo Church (also known as Edmundsbury Chapel) desired to have a church located between the Combahee and Ashepoo Rivers in Colleton County, they ordered the construction of the Church of the Ascension (also called Combahee Church). Construction began in 1853 and the church was opened in 1856. The Rev. Stephen Elliott of Ashepoo Church served as rector until 1865. Services at Ascension Church ended in 1861 with coming of war, however, and were never fully resumed. The church was vacant by 1880 and stood until shortly after 1915, when the bricks were stolen.

273.02.15: CHURCH OF THE MESSIAH, NORTH SANTEE (MARYVILLE), 1842-1961

0.75 linear feet. The Church of the Messiah, North Santee (Georgetown County, S.C.), was organized in 1842 at an old chapel in the parish of Prince George, Winyah. A new church was built in 1853 and it flourished for several years. Between 1862 and 1909 the church was open only sporadically and suffered many setbacks. After a long period of dormancy, the Church of the Messiah, North Santee, was moved to Maryville (Georgetown County, S.C.) and reopened in 1955. It closed permanently in 1961. Collection includes financial accounts, 1961, a register of baptisms, marriages, and burials, 1855-1907, a register of church services, 1955-1961, and vestry minutes, 1842-1961.

273.02.23: GLENNIE, ALEXANDER, Papers 1828-1872 (ca. 40 items)

The Rev. Alexander Glennie (1804-1880) came from England to Charleston in 1828 and served for many years as a minister in the Protestant Episcopal Church in the Diocese of South Carolina. He spent much of his career as rector of the church at All Saints, Waccamaw, where he became known for his ministry to the slaves in that area. Included here are correspondence, notes, an undated pencil sketch of the church at All Saint's, Waccamaw, and journals of Glennie's travels to England, Scotland, Mexico, North Carolina, New York, and Virginia. In addition, Glennie's ministry to the slaves in his parish is documented by several slave communion passes, confirmation certificates, and a brass ring "used at the marriage of negroes." NOTE: The slavery-related items are housed in the safe at the South Carolina Historical Society.

0.25 linear feet. St. Bartholomew's Parish (Colleton County, S.C.) was created in 1706 but a parish church was never built. Chapels of ease were built on the Pon Pon River (south Edisto River) near Jacksonboro, at Edmunsbury on the west side of the Ashepoo River, and in Walterboro. The Pon Pon chapel was burned and rebuilt twice, and is commonly known as the "Burnt Church." Records include correspondence, 1820-1829, vestry minutes, 1822-1856, financial records, 1813-1845, and legal papers from the 1820s. Also included is a journal belonging to the rector of St. Bartholomew's Parish, documenting services performed between 1818 and 1840.

BOX 18

St. Paul's Parish was created in 1706 and a church was built near the Stono River in 1708. A chapel of ease, built in 1736, became the main church after the original fell into ruin. After this chapel fell in 1778, the parish was without a church and regular minister for more than thirty years. A new church, finished by 1812, was consecrated by Bishop Theodore Dehon in 1813. Frederick Dalcho (1770-1836) officiated at St. Paul's Stono from 1814 to 1817. The Rev. Philip Gadsden (1798-1870) served as rector from 1826 until his retirement in 1864. Starting in 1829, Gadsden divided his services between the church at Stono and one at Summerville, which gradually became the main church in St. Paul's Parish. Following the Civil War, the church at St. Paul's Stono was abandoned and became extinct.

The materials in this collection include a 1706 conveyance from the estate of Landgrave Edmund Bellinger for the land on which the first church in St. Paul's Parish was built. The remainder of the materials date from after the American Revolution. Included are circular and general correspondence, 1787-1864, records of the construction of a new church, 1786-ca. 1809 (including subscription lists, bids, and drawings), and financial records, 1784-1864 (including accounts and receipts). Frederick Dalcho and Philip Gadsden figure prominently among the correspondents.

1.75 linear feet. The Society for the Advancement of Christianity in South Carolina was founded in 1810 under the leadership of the Rev. Theodore Dehon (1776-1817). Its purpose was to promote Christian knowledge, establish missions, and encourage candidates for the ministry. The establishment of this organization marked the beginning of a period of rapid growth in the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of South Carolina, and its most active work since the disestablishment of the Church of England during the Revolution. In 1869 the scope of the Advancement Society, as it was known, was extended to include the African-American population of the state. In the mid-1870s, however, the Board of Missions was created to address this specific task, which continued into the twentieth century. These manuscript records, mostly in bound volumes, consist primarily of the minutes of the Society's annual conventions from 1810 to 1971, and its financial records from 1853 to 1963. The minutes for the conventions of 1863 through 1878 were burned. The financial records include cash books, common fund books, trust funds, reports, and correspondence.
