Creator: Waring, Thomas R.

Description: 30 linear ft.

Biographical/Historical Note: Newspaper editor. Born in Charleston, S.C. in 1907, he became city editor of the News and Courier (Charleston, S.C.) in 1931 and editor in 1951. In his editorials Waring defended states rights and school segregation. He died in 1993.

Scope and Content: Papers chiefly consist of Waring's editorial correspondence with journalists, politicians, staff, readers, and many other individuals and organizations. Topics figuring prominently in the correspondence include journalism; local, state, and national politics; civil rights; school segregation (and desegregation); race relations; racism; black activism; race and heredity; conservatism; communism; historic preservation and economic development in Charleston (S.C.); the fluoridation controversy; labor unions; a hospital workers' strike in Charleston (1969); North Charleston (S.C.); education; Waring's crusade against the Highlander Folk School; the history of the News and Courier; and cultural affairs. Correspondence is arranged alphabetically by subject matter or name of correspondent and is interspersed with clippings, pamphlets, and other materials.

A group of files (1916, 1943-1977) including editorial correspondence, staff memos, and other materials concerns News and Courier operations and policies. These papers are alphabetically arranged by subject and include files on circulation; censorship; complaints and comments; contributors and unsolicited manuscripts; the Ashley Cooper column; editorial statistics; job applications; libel accusations; microfilm; promotion and public relations; and suppressed stories. Another group of files (1940-1976) includes Waring's correspondence with newspaper and magazine publishers and editors (alphabetically arranged by name of publication). A third group of materials (1948-1977) mainly consists of Waring's correspondence pertaining to the News and Courier's participation in or use of various wire services and news organizations. Included are extensive files on the Southern Education Reporting Service concerning race issues and segregation; and correspondence with Reed Sarratt, director of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association.

Preferred Citation: Waring, Thomas R. Thomas R. Waring, Jr. papers, 1902-1977 (bulk 1940-1977). (1207.00) South Carolina Historical Society.
