Scope and Content: Papers consist of correspondence, financial and property records, and other items pertaining to the Alston, Pringle, and Frost families of South Carolina, collected mainly by Mary Motte Alston Pringle (1803-1884). Also included are the papers (1822-1870) of Mary Motte Alston Pringle consisting of bound manuscript volumes (see separate record under her name).

Correspondence (1780-1958) includes extensive correspondence (1840s-1884) of Mary Motte Alston Pringle with her children, including many letters from her at Runimede Plantation and in Charleston (S.C.) to her daughter Susan concerning family matters and Susan's education and upbringing; letters (1853-1889, with transcriptions) from Edward J. Pringle (1826-1899) to his family concerning his life in San Francisco (Ca.) as a young attorney there during and after the gold rush, litigation regarding Spanish and Mexican land grant claims, politics, the treatment of the Chinese ("they are abused & beaten & shot here like dogs"), and other topics; love letters between Francis LeJau Frost, and his fiancée, then wife, Rebecca B. Pringle Frost, as he attempted to reestablish rice planting on the Santee River, and while travelling as a salesman for phosphate companies; and letters of Susan Pringle Frost (1873-1960) regarding the Miles Brewton House (Charleston, S.C.) and her life as a court reporter, realtor, pioneer preservationist, and suffragette. Other correspondents include Edward Frost., Rev. Paul Trapier, Rev. Peter J. Shand, and Rev. Alexander Glennie (concerning Glennie's possible appointment to an African bishopric in the 1840s). Correspondence also includes photocopies of two letters, both dated October 1818, from Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826) to William Alston (1756-1839) regarding Jefferson's recommendations on wine.

An undated letter from the 1850s recounts how Albert Sumner, the brother of Charles Sumner, tried to separate a slave family he had inherited by offering the father in a separate sale. Sumner then offered the man to Charles T. Lowndes (who had purchased the family) at an exorbitant price, and Lowndes purchased the man in order to restore him to his family.

Papers of William Bull Pringle include accounts (1866-1870) with factors James R. Pringle & Son for rice sales and milling and household and plantation expenses; estate records of William A. Williams, Pringle's overseer (1844-1845); and slave bills of sale. There are also business receipts (1792-1832) of William Alston (1756-1839); and a receipt book (1866-1872) of William Alston Pringle. Property records (1693-1918) include a 1735 grant of land in Craven County (S.C.) to Andrew Broughton and a 1794 grant in Camden District (S.C.) to Robert Brodie.

Other items include genealogical and biographical materials; recipes; ephemera; estate records; almanacs; legal documents; a scrapbook mainly concerning the Miles Brewton House; writings; William Alston's bills of sale for race horses and a groom (slave), horse pedigrees, and a diagram of a race track (ca. 1787-1803); "The Life of St. Paul" (1882, ms volume with illustrations); and research notes (1988-1990). Miscellaneous items include a legal address (1862?) to the "Gentlemen of the Court of Inquiry" concerning the duel between William R. Calhoun and Alfred M. Rhett; and communion cards issued to slaves in All Saints Parish (S.C.).

Also see: Cote, Richard. Guide to the Alston-Pringle-Frost Manuscript Collection in the South Carolina Historical Society. Charleston, 1990. This item includes biographical sketches of creators, a full chronology, indexes for correspondence by both author/recipient and a chronological index.
