Notes on lecture on slavery.

A small notebook marked "1860" on the cover contains entries dating 1860 to 1861, beginning with notes concerning slaves and plantation affairs. One entry gives the names of "Negroes at work on fort." A subsequent section consists of several pages of a diary recounting a railroad journey in Virginia and a visit to the battlefield at Manassas (Bull Run). As Allston arrived there, he learned that General Barnard E. Bee had been mortally wounded, noting that "Bee was shot by minnie ball thro the abdomen." Allston further noted of Bee, "He was placed in a house (Levi's) on the field of battle 5 miles off so I took shelter in Capt. Vanderhorst's tent." Bee's body was taken away on a railroad car the next morning. Allston then describes the aftermath of the battle: "I followed Dr. Erskine ... to the battle-field where the dead and dying presented an awful ghastly sight, men & horses. The Mercury must contain a description as I met LWS on the field taking notes..." The initials refer to Leonidas W. Spratt, a war correspondent for the Charleston Mercury newspaper. Allston also mentions that Henry Middleton was shot in the left lung. This was Private Henry Augustus Middleton, who died on July 27, 1861. Another notebook marked "1862" contains notes mainly concerning financial affairs. Several loose items in this book include a letter (1862) to R.F.W. Allston from G.F.B. Leighton which includes an account statement; and a passport, or travel pass (15 May 1862) issued to Allston by the Confederate Provost Marshal's Office for a visit to "Society Hill & home."
